

ABOUT KUUNDA

Kuunda is a B2B fintech company that has built growth APIs & a Liquidity Platform for Micro-merchants, Agent Networks and consumers.

Agents, informal micro-merchants and consumers are often cash-based and undocumented, which means their access to appropriate financial products and systems is constrained. Not only has the lack of access to liquidity been an economic inhibitor, but it has also been a factor that has negatively impacted the growth of individual productivity within an economy.

Our end goal is not to give a loan, our liquidity solutions are tools to allow people to grow their businesses and enable individuals to feel free and be more resilient. In short, we offer solutions to enable our users to grow and develop. Kuunda's algorithms have thus far been successfully adapted to suit a number of different use cases. Kuunda's best-in-class Hapa Cash product has been used for short-term financing, to finance e-float facilities, airtime advances and fuel advances. In addition, Kuunda has launched Kazi Cash, a medium-term (7 & 14 Day duration) lending products that are focused on business growth that supports MSME's.

Kuunda builds dynamic, embedded financing solutions that create sustainable economic productivity by providing agent networks, small businesses and consumers with access to liquidity products and services.

By developing financial identities, coupled with our customisable lending platform and by offering extensible APIs for any fintech, bank or telco managing networks of agents and merchants, we believe that by creating proprietary financial identities, this will enable better distribution of upstream financial products to the long tail of the informal sector that has otherwise been unreachable.
